

Welcome to the Volume 2 of 'The Evaluation Facts' Newsletter for the 2013 - 2014 season. The Evaluation Facts is a regular newsletter keeping you in touch with the latest information from the Graham's Factree Cultivar Evaluation Project.

With the first of the evaluations for the season coming in from the site in Renmark it looks like it's going to be a busy year. The site has around 450 selections that are now in their third leaf and will be having their first evaluation this year. In addition to the large number of evaluations that will come from Renmark, we should see evaluations on third leaf stone fruit trees from the other sites around Australia.

Evaluator Training

As we are going to get these evaluations from first time evaluators, we again ran a 'calibration' session on the 14th of October to refresh our team on all aspects of the evaluation process. This was a very successful day and it raised some very interesting questions.

The main question that we struggled to come to terms with revolved around scoring for 'commercial potential' or for 'consumer acceptance'. The issue for us was that there are a number of varieties on the market which don't have good commercial acceptance, but growers can make good money from growing these varieties (now does that make sense or what?). The decision we came to was for us to continue to compare to currently available commercial varieties for that time of the season. We can't worry about whether it will be accepted by the consumer because if we don't release a variety that is better than what is currently available, then consumers will still only have the option to purchase inferior fruit.

We invited Jason to give us a presentation on his travels around the world for his Nuffield Scholarship. We learned that he travelled internationally for over 18 weeks during the past eight or so months visiting many regions of the world. Although his primary focus was Fruit Evaluation, he was required to 'broaden his horizons' and visit a broad range of industries, mostly agricultural. Jason reported to us that the way we are conducting evaluations is right up there with the best in the world. During this season he will be trialling a couple of possible new evaluation tools to see if they can help improve the evaluation process further.

What do the scores given to each selection mean?

I'm repeating the new scoring description here to remind everyone how to interpret the evaluations that are provided. The trouble is that at the evaluator training session this got somewhat complicated for two main reasons. The first reason related to varieties where their chilling requirement didn't suit the evaluation region and so the variety was given a lower score than it might get in a more suitable region, and the second being possible crop load issues, which may or may not be related to the chilling. Take the 'flat' peach for example, Jason stated that he didn't taste a 'bad' flat peach at all during last season and the only reason they didn't receive a 6 or above was due to crop load. My question is: do they have potential to sell at higher prices which will make up for the smaller crop? I don't have the answer to this but keep this sort of question in mind when considering which selections to test and the score they received.

< 5/10 = poor variety and should not be seriously considered

5/10 = variety displays some negative attributes but needs further consideration

6/10 = variety is equal to the current commercial varieties available to growers and should be trialled by individual growers to see if it works for them.

6.5/10 = variety is showing that it is superior to current commercial varieties and should be seriously considered for commercial planting.

Horticulture Australia

This project has been funded by HAL using voluntary contributions from Graham's Factree Pty Ltd and matched funds from the Australian Government.

7/10 and above = variety is very good and is highly recommended for growers to consider planting commercially.
